

Eleven:FiftyNine

Susan Phan

This piece shows the time in a student's life that goes into studying and schoolwork. There seems to be such little time during the day and school seems to take the bulk of it, leaving no time for mental and physical health. Most students seem to define their worth based on a letter grade and mentally it can take a toll. However there is more to a person than just letters and numbers that school defines us by. The time on the clock represents the 11:59 deadline on most assignments that students are scrambling to meet.

